

ALLIES MAKE SPECTACULAR RHINE CROSSING

Allied Warplanes Swarm Over Germany To Support Drive

The War Today..

By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

AS THE WESTERN ALLIES throw their mighty forces into the trans-Rhenish assault which marks the opening of the final decisive battle, we shall be better prepared to follow this historic engagement if we pause to check on the general strategy and objectives of the combatants.

If you will turn to your map we shall work the thing out together. And let's simply it by direct questions and answer.

Question: What are the immediate Allied objectives? Answer: (1) To capture the great industrial Ruhr, Hitler's number one source of war manufactures. (2) To force the six German armies (or remnants of armies) to make a stand, with the purpose of annihilating them. (3) To open the routes to Berlin and the heart of the Reich for a junction with the Russians.

Question: What are the purposes of the Hitlerites? Answer: To do what they've been doing for long months, namely, continue to wage a defensive delaying action. Having fought, those who are able will run away, to continue the battle somewhere else—perhaps in southern Germany—another day.

Question: What general strategy will the Allies follow? Answer: Your map will show you that the Ruhr stretches back from the Rhine in the Duisburg sector. The Ruhr is densely covered with factories and towns, and presents a tremendous obstacle for an attacking army. This being so, why should the Allies make a frontal attack? The answer is they may not be doing so, but may be choosing the alternative of thrusting out on both sides of the Ruhr and dealing with it after they have it in a sack.

One likely sector for a crossing lies between Emmerich and Weser. This gives into an open plain north of the Ruhr and leads on to Berlin. It's good tank country, and Montgomery presumably hopes he will be able to engage a large enemy force in such an ideal spot for a battle of annihilation.

Question: Is there chance of the Allies surprising the Germans? Answer: There is chance of surprise in that they lack the forces to defend their entire front and the Allies might fling an attack at a lightly held position.

Question: What is the relative strength of the opposing forces? Answer: The Nazis are badly mauled and discouraged along much of the front. The Allies have numerical superiority in troops, and a vast superiority in armor and other equipment. They also are going in to battle with the greatest air force ever got together to support the ghost of the once huge Luftwaffe.

SOVIETS GAIN SIX MILES IN BERLIN DRIVE

Sweep Beyond Kuestrin; German Capital Only 31 Miles Away

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, March 24.—Red army troops were described by the German radio as driving today toward Berlin in a renewed offensive that had swept six miles beyond captured Kuestrin to within 31 miles of the capital.

There was no confirmation from Moscow, where a Soviet communique announced Russian forces had split the Nazi defenders of the Baltic ports of Danzig and Gdynia, and were clamping huge pincers on Moravia, Bohemia and Vienna.

Nazi Broadcasts said Russian infantry and tanks had smashed through German defenses along the Berlin-Oder line and had spurred to Goltzow on the main Kuestrin-Berlin railroad.

The Nazis asserted they stalled the Red army drive at Goltzow, but said an indecisive battle was in progress.

A thunderous artillery barrage and attacks by hundreds of Soviet divebombers were said to have preceded the assault, into which, Berlin declared, Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's First White Russian army threw 400 tanks and 72,000 troops.

Big Push About To Start

"The major Russian offensive against Berlin is immediately at hand, said a Berlin report. London sources expressed the belief Zhukov had massed 100 divisions, possibly 1,200,000 men, for a climactic drive on Berlin.

Approximately 250 miles northeast of the Berlin front Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's Second White Russian army halted the Danzig-Gdynia pocket by ramming a three-mile wedge to the Bay of Danzig.

His troops captured the coastal town of Zoppot, and at the northern end of a three-mile arm to the sea won Kollekn (Koliki), three miles south of Gdynia, and at the opposite end seized Schmieleb, three miles north of Danzig.

The Russians captured Loblau, Gross Boekau and Artschau, all within five miles of Danzig.

'We Will Fight On' Is German Theme

LONDON, March 24.—A German broadcast declared today the German high command "adopts the supreme principle of continuing the battle no matter under what conditions."

A Nazi military spokesman, after announcement of the Rhine crossing, asserted new German fronts were being formed in the east and west and that the battle would go on.

"All the means at our disposal are being employed," he said. "It is the aim of the German command to inflict upon the enemy, during his advance losses as high as possible."

Declaring the Germans needed more time to develop additional troop deployments and establish new positions, the commentator said:

"The race for time is the most important fact at present as the Allies are considerably pressed. The German command endeavors to delay a decision until the moment when the employment of additional German material and tactical means is advisable."

STUDENTS TO ENTER MT. UNION FESTIVAL

Salem High school's three musical organizations—band, orchestra and chorus—are rehearsing in preparation for the annual Spring Music Festival at Mount Union college April 27.

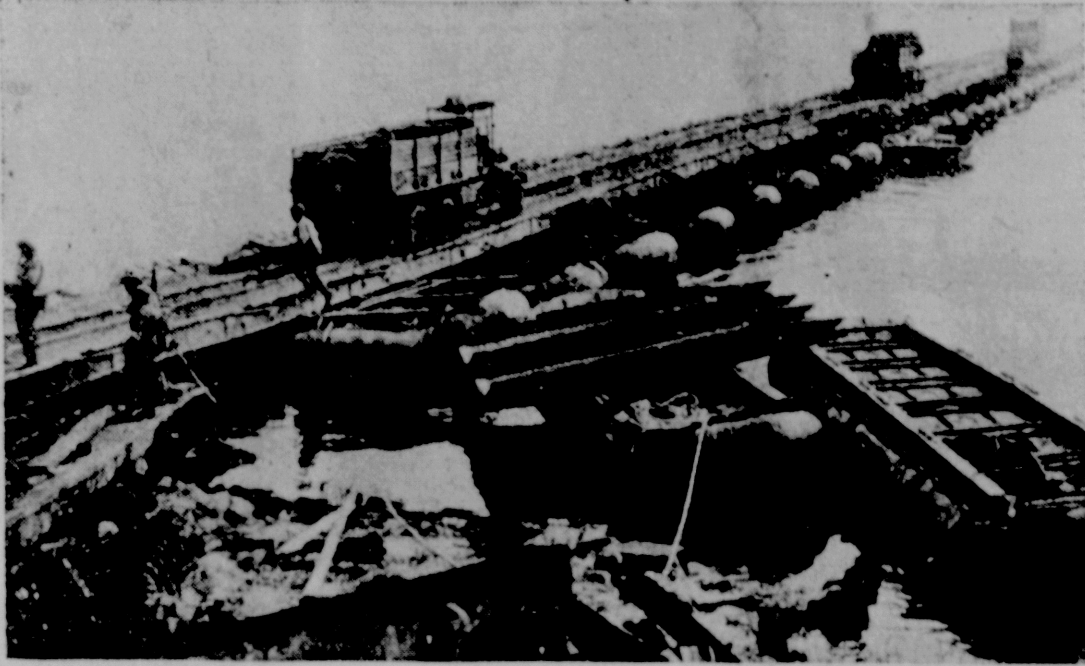

C. M. Brautigam, Salem director, who is a member of the festival arrangements committee, is in charge of the band division competition.

Announcement was made at a high school today that Mary Lou Haessly and Don Wright were crowned King and Queen in a recent school War Bond and Stamp selling drive that netted $2,544.65 in sales.

A committee, composed of Senior home room teachers, is considering the possibility of presenting diplomas individually to graduating students at the commencement exercises this year.

Due to over-crowded conditions in the auditorium during the past 39 years, diplomas were presented after the ceremony.

OKINAWA NAVAL BASE BLASTED

U. S. Navy Discloses Loss Of Aircraft Carrier Bismarck Sea

(By Associated Press)

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Guam, March 24.—Tokyo radio said today American carrier planes were bombing the big naval and air base at Okinawa in the Ryukyus, midway between Japan and Formosa, carrying the assault into the second straight day.

Adm. Chester W. Nimitz offered no confirmation of this in his official reports today which disclosed loss of the Escort Carrier Bismarck Sea, in the battle for Iwo.

Nimitz's reports increased from 575 to 731 the bag of enemy planes during carrier attacks earlier this week on southern Japan.

Tokyo said 230 planes, presumably from Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitscher's task force 58 which crippled Nippon's home fleet and heavily damaged major enemy naval air stations Sunday and Monday, opened up on Okinawa yesterday afternoon.

Down 81 More Planes

Today Nimitz said sky fights between the enemy home-based air force and Mitscher's carrier planes raged on through Tuesday and Wednesday with 81 more of the foe shot down.

Nimitz added 75 more enemy planes to the total probably destroyed or damaged on the ground.

The Bismarck Sea, reported by the Navy in Washington to displace 10,200 tons, was sunk by Japanese planes off Iwo on Feb. 21.

Associated Press Correspondent Robert Geiger reported a second unidentified carrier was damaged.

The enemy raiders strafed and killed several of the crew bobbing in the water while awaiting rescue. Admiral Nimitz said most of the ship's personnel were saved.

Today's communique said reconnaissance fliers had confirmed "essential damage" inflicted at Kyushu island on:

Kanyoya which has the largest naval air station in southwestern Japan, as well as extensive maintenance shops; Sacki, which has another large modern naval air station. Omura, whose naval air station guards the big naval base of Sasebo; a so the air bases of Kagoshima, Miyazaki and Mitsukihara.

Williams' Rejection Emphasizes Split In Ranks of Democrats

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Aubrey Williams' political scalp swung from the belt of the senate's conservative Democrats today after a nomination-rejecting vote that emphasized the split in majority party ranks.

With the help of 33 Republicans, 19 Democrats yesterday applied the axe to President Roosevelt's appointee for rural electrification administrator. The Republicans had been expected to vote almost solidly against Williams—but the size of the Democratic opposition was surprising.

Fifty of the Democratic "no" votes came from the south and two from a border state, Maryland. Six southern administration supporters voted for him.

The results applied the conservative answer to what they consider the challenge of the CIO's Political Action committee for control of Democratic party machinery, plus resentment piled up over the years against New Dealers in general and Harry Hopkins in particular.

Williams was first a protégé of Hopkins in the WFO and then the N.Y.A. member of the citizens PAC, he is described as an ardent New Dealer and of the Henry Wallace school of thought.

Williams' friends rallied to him, after the vote the National Farmers union announcing a "victory dinner" here Wednesday with Franklin D. Roosevelt the speaker.

the Rhine over moonlit roads, watched the attack develop from a front line regimental command post, went across the river and finally took a flight in a Cub airplane for a 3,000-foot-high seat over the great Rhine for the air drop by thousands of parachutists and glider troops.

I will try to draw into one view the tremendous overall significance of the attack by the ordinary men of Britain and America turned soldier.

There is not a man, American or British, from generals to privates, who does not feel this is the beginning of the last major battle that will bring the war to a quick end.

It is the first time this feeling has permeated into the hearts of the always pessimistic GI's who have to do the fighting.

Everything the Allies, amateurs to begin with, have learned in three years of war has been thrown into this battle against the most powerful German fighting force left on the Western front.

German defeat now means loss of the Ruhr, opening of the gate to Berlin, an eventual linkup with the Russian armies and loss of the war for the Germans.

BOOSTERS RETAIN PRESENT OFFICERS

President Joe Kelley and other officers of the Salem Boosters club were re-elected at the annual meeting Friday night in the Memorial building.

The other officers, Secretary-Treasurer Arthur Brian and Vice President T. Emerson Smith, together with James Primm and Robert Culbertson, comprise the board of directors.

An invitation was extended to H. W. Emswiler of Columbus, state high school athletic commissioner, to speak at the annual banquet for the Salem High school basketball team. No date for the event was set, pending word from Emswiler.

Club members sent a telegram to the Columbiana basketball team at Springfield wishing them luck in their final bid for the state Class B basketball crown today.

The Boosters approved a plan to donate to the High school all the old football game movies for establishment of a movie library.

Secretary Brian gave his annual report.

1,500 Other Planes Drop Paratroopers East of Rhine River

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, March 24.—More than 3,500 Allied warplanes, the greatest armada ever to cross the English channel at one time, swarmed over northwest Germany today in support of the Allied storming of the Rhine, as possibly 1,500 transport planes and gliders showered a great army east of the river.

The most devastating scourge ever laid down on a single area was explosion on the Ruhr valley in the crucial hours before daybreak. Then 1,500 American bombers and fighters hammered 12 Nazi airfields and carried out searing missions across the battle zone.

Shortly after noon the German radio warned of another bomber formation heading from Italy toward the heart of Germany, possibly for the U. S. 15th air force's first attack on Berlin.

Many of the parachute troop carriers and gliders—the number would indicate from 20,000 to 30,000 men, the greatest number ever engaged in an airborne operation—thundered across the strait of Dover from England. No sooner had the parachute troops landed than other planes began supplying them with additional ammunition. The first batch of supplies was dropped across the Rhine at noon by some 250 U. S. Eighth air force Liberators.

Bombers Precede Gliders

Thick layers of heavy bombers and fighters streamed monotonously across the channel. Then came the gliders with their towing planes, and after them the troop-carrying craft, hundred after hundred, flying so low every detail could be seen from below.

Before daybreak, swarms of bombers had worked over the Germans' defenses on the eastern Rhine bank. Even before that, pilots said the great Muenster box north of the Ruhr was a land of death, with towns blazing like funeral pyres and roads without a sign of movement.

A huge force of British heavy bombers smashed at the northern Ruhr during the night, and pilots declared whole towns and villages were "burning like torches."

Fifty-three spots in the Ruhr area hammered during the last three days were blasted for more than an hour today, starting at 8 a. m. by 400 Marauders and Havocs of the U. S. Ninth bombardment division.

Record Air Fleets

The British-based Allied air fleets crossed the English coast in formation bigger than any one armada that supported D-day landings in Normandy last June 6.

The German warning service said bomber formations were south

Bislich Falls, Wesel, Rees Are Entered

By JAMES M. LONG

PARIS, March 24.—American and British assault forces crossed the lower Rhine on a broad front today and fought swiftly into the cities of Wesel and Rees while thousands of airborne troops dropped onto the north German plain above the Ruhr in a bold bid for victory this spring.

Bislich was captured. The Ruhr was caught between Field Marshal Montgomery's 21st army group and the American First army, swiftly expanding its Remagen bridgehead less than a dozen miles south of the great industrial basin.

Farther south, Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third army secured its bridgehead on the upper Rhine and debouched on flat country leading 302 miles to Russian armies at the Oder southeast of Berlin.

U. S. Ninth army and British-Canadian troops crossed the lower Rhine in navy-manned assault and landing craft in the darkness, protected by an artillery barrage and the bombing and strafing of thousands of planes.

Montgomery announced the German commander at Wesel, at the northwest corner of the Ruhr, was captured. Maj. Gen. Deutsch, commanding flak batteries in the area, was killed.

The first identified bridgeheads were at Rees, across from Xanten. Troops captured Bislich on the east side of the barrier river.

Between 20,000 and 30,000 parachute troops of Lt. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton's Allied First Airborne army landed behind German lines. This was the third, and perhaps decisive crossing of the Rhine. All arms of the Allies participated.

Winston Churchill, at Montgomery's headquarters when the offensive was launched, declared: "Once the river line is pierced and the crust of German resistance is broken, decisive victory in Europe will be near."

Montgomery told his troops: "The enemy has been driven into a corner and he cannot escape. The complete and decisive defeat of the Germans is certain."

Cross Rhine In At Least Seven Places

The Rhine was crossed with amazing ease in at least seven places. By noon, some bridgeheads had been driven nearly two miles inland into the heartland of Germany, leading to the north door of Berlin over ideal tank country.

Lt. Gen. William H. Simpson's U. S. Ninth army crossed the stream in growing force, along with British, Scottish Canadian and Welsh troops.

The new Rhine crossings employed the same technique as the Normandy landings. Artillery was placed right against the river. Guns of all calibre thundered at the Germans over open sights.

Large quantities of armored troops had been trained to cross the river in the profusion of LSTs, Ducks, Alligators and Buffaloes—secretly brought in by the United States and Royal navies. Sailors dropped their blue cars for the olive drab of the infantry. Rafts and assault boats were used. Pontons were constructed. Stormboats piled the mighty Rhine in great strength.

Artillery Barrage, Smoke Screen Offer Protection

Before this Third Rhine crossing was the north German plain, as broad as Kansas and as long as Pennsylvania. Below the Ruhr, First and Third army troops of Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's 12th army group were bulging out their bridgeheads swiftly in what appeared to be a prelude to a breakout.

The whole offensive was mounted behind a 65-mile smoke screen, perhaps the greatest artificial fog ever produced.

This was the greatest amphibious operation since Normandy. The Rhine, indeed, was the greatest hazard since the English channel.

Airborne Troops Meet Only Light Opposition

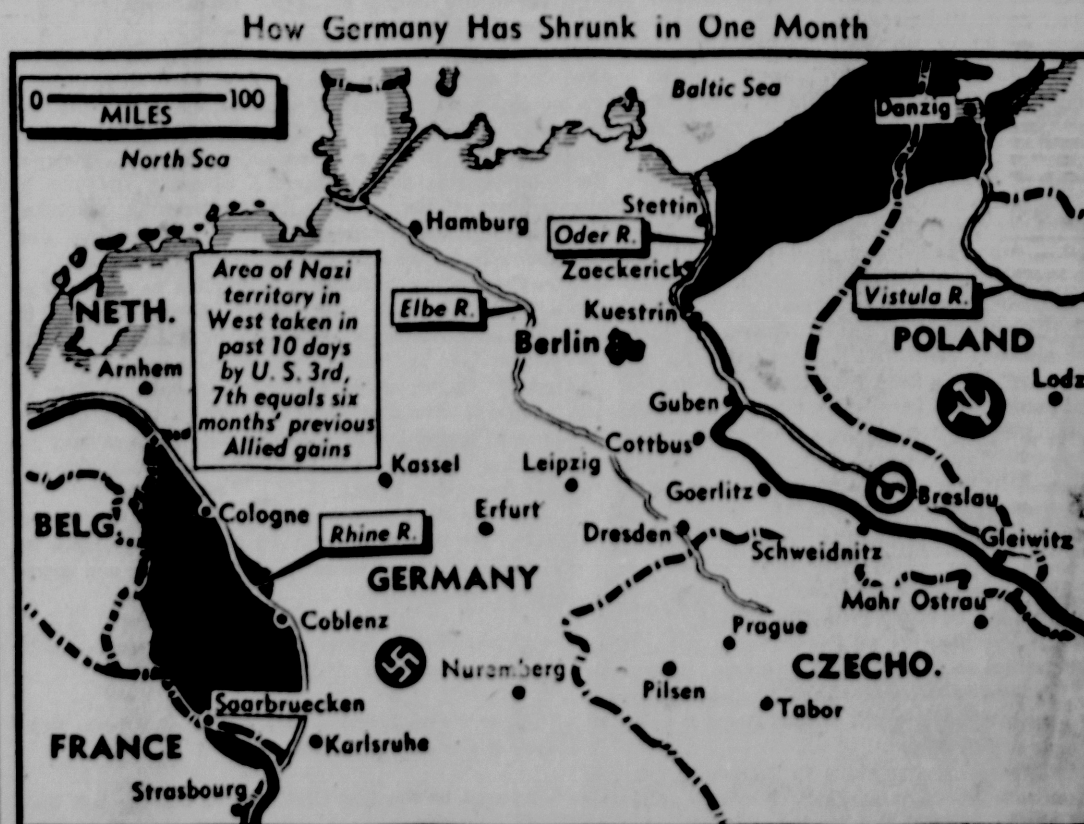

The Rhine in the new crossing area has a five mile current and low gravel banks.

The airborne troops came down against only moderate opposition.

Beyond the Rhine, only three large north-south rivers cut through the flatland farms and dairying lands of Prussian Westphalia before Berlin. These are the Ems through Emboder, the Weser through Bremen and the Elbe through Hannover.

The operation threatened to cut off the whole Dutch territory south of the Zuider Zee where the V-bombs have been launched against Britain. A slash to the sea would liberate such great Dutch cities as Amsterdam, Rotterdam, The Hague, Utrecht and Haarlem.

Our Timing Is Off

In a few more weeks the soil will be warm enough for potential gardeners to start thinking about early crops. Yet, it is the prevailing opinion that Victory Gardening in 1945 will not have the benefit of the same widespread enthusiasm which made the program a huge success in 1942, 1943 and 1944. The need is greater than ever, but the novelty has worn off.

The conservation and the equally urgent need for automobile conservation, which were lying heavily on the public conscience when care were newer and tires better than they are now, have ceased to have the benefit of the popular discussion inspired by earlier fears of a transportation breakdown, yet it is a demonstrable fact that 1945 is going to be the critical year in the progressive deterioration of the people's privately owned transportation.

It is common knowledge that there is critical need for a revival of the patriotic fervor that caused hundreds of citizens, both men and women, to find a place in war production, yet many of these same citizens and others who pitched in to do their part in the preceding three years now are out of the war employment market.

With the Seventh War Loan coming up in May and the inflationary pressure of war boom money growing hourly, there is a singular lack of that firm determination to buy Bonds up to the hilt that enabled the Treasury to count on over-subscriptions earlier in the war. In the Sixth War Loan at the close of last year, individual purchasers failed to respond in the manner that gave them near-perfect and better-than-perfect records in previous drives.

The people's determination to fight inflation where it starts, in black markets, chiseling, the fatal urge to get more when there is less to be had, is beginning to sag. It is getting easy to condone the scramble for special favors. We need to pay more attention to casualty lists, less attention to the grappling for advantage at home. We need to keep quibbles over postwar issues in their proper place; the nation is still in the midst of history's bloodiest, costliest war.

These are some of the obvious signs that our national timing is off in the execution of wartime duties. There are additional signs in government circles of a tendency to ease up when the plainly evident need is for more bearing down—signs that officialdom as well as the people may be guilty of too much enthusiasm too soon and not enough enthusiasm in the closing minutes of the game.

No one can be blamed, and no one needs to be blamed. It merely has become one of the circumstances of the war that too many of us have yielded to the temptation to ease up and become preoccupied with other things too soon. The damage is not irreparable, at least no more so than the damage done late last year when even the military leaders made the mistake of anticipating a letup that wasn't in the cards.

The cure for the condition is, of course, to bring the plainly visible realities back into sharp focus. With collapse of the German war organization in Europe, the victorious Allies will be confronted with history's greatest rehabilitation job as the alternative to chaos. The United States will have to bear a heavy share of responsibility for what happens there. Simultaneously, the United States will have to turn its full power to the successful prosecution of another major war in the Pacific. This is not the time to ease off. This is the time to bear down.

The Mighty Saar

Loss of the Saar Basin to Germany's war production was a major defeat even before it became certain that the disorganized troops left in the region would sustain complete military disaster.

The Saar Basin was added to Germany's war production in the spring of 1935. Less than a month later, Hitler was able to announce that he was building an air force, a submarine fleet and introducing compulsory military training; he had what he wanted.

Germany traditionally needs the Saar's industries and coal mines to wage war. It needed them in 1914—and had them, thanks to Prussian foresight after Napoleon's defeat at Waterloo. At Versailles, Clemenceau demanded the Saar for France, but in one of the scholarly deals which were going to satisfy everybody by satisfying nobody, the Saar was merely detached and turned over to a commission pending a plebiscite at the end of 15 years. The Nazis, starting with the advantage of a sympathetic population, made certain the plebiscite would turn out in their favor. By means of strong-arm campaigning and the repatriation of some 50,000 former Saarlanders brought back for the plebiscite, they outvoted the French about 20 to one—and Hitler had what he needed. France, by the same token, had lost what it needed, though the fact is that even if France had been given the Saar Basin outright it couldn't have utilized its resources against the opposition of a predominantly hostile population.

The loss of the Saar is just as important in reverse as the privilege of using it. Germany had three vital industrial areas—the Saar, the Ruhr and Silesia. The Americans are in the Saar and preparing to invade the Ruhr. The Russians have Silesia.

The Strong and the Weak

"We may deplore, if we choose," said Prime Minister Churchill to the House of Commons, "that there is a difference between the great and small, between the strong and weak in the world. There is undoubtedly such a difference."

Mr. Churchill was speaking in defense of the voting procedure agreed to at Yalta. And he was referring, of course, to great and small nations. No one will deny his broad and obvious statement, but it could do with some expansion and clarification.

Does Mr. Churchill grant that greatness and strength carry responsibility as well as power? Does he feel that a monopoly of greatness and strength implies a monopoly of wisdom? Does he believe that smallness and weakness have no right to equal justice, dignity and consideration with the great and strong?

We trust that the answer is yes to the first question, and no to the others. We trust that President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin feel the same way. And we shall look forward to seeing their sentiments proved in action at the San Francisco conference.

The Stars Say

For Sunday, March 25

SUNDAY'S horoscope, while holding excellent promise for lively, pleasant and successful social functions, artistic engagements and affectional or romantic affiliations yet there is likely to be serious lack of cooperation or approbation from elders, superiors or those holding malicious notions. Reckless, angry attitudes or rash judgments aggravate.

Those whose birthday it is encounter a year of conflicting situations with many pleasant and progressive relations, yet offset by oppositions or difficult problems arising from elders or superiors or those maliciously disposed. With tact, reasonable and amiable conduct this might be composed and a prosperous and happy year, in which romance and culture may be important.

A child born on this day will possess many social and artistic graces enhancing its success and happiness in life, despite opposition from elders.

For Monday, March 26

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a day of much liveliness but possibly in a disturbing, disintegrating and devastating manner, in which the utmost control of the mind, emotions and impulses is imperative in order to escape separations, quarrels, reckless acts and disruptions affecting the life in various relations and with far-reaching reactions. Beware much subtlety, duplicity and intrigue and maintain a calm and balanced course of action.

Those whose birthday it is may not be surprised at a year of turmoil, upset, confusion and intrigue, in which estrangements, regrets, many phases of treachery, intrigue and subtle undercurrents have dangerous results. It would be well to formulate a plan of regulated, calm and realistic judgment if the menace is to be averted. The emotions and impulses may be rampant and should be subdued and rigidly directed to constructive results.

A child born on this day will be lively, astute and crafty, yet be carried away by its erratic emotions or impulses, unless given early rigid direction and discipline.

At last several bridge prizes that are worth keeping have been won. Thanks to the Yanks!

While we're having a nice spring over here, Germany is due for a bad fall.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Symptoms of Food Poisoning

BY HERMAN N. BUNDSEN, M.D.

OUTBREAKS of food poisoning in war plants may become an increasing cause of loss of time from work or absenteeism. However, much can be done to prevent these occurrences.

One of the most common causes of these outbreaks is contamination of food with germs known as staphylococcus aureus. These germs form a toxin or poison. The symptoms occur within two to six hours after the spoiled food is eaten. Fever is usually not present. There are sickness of the stomach, vomiting, cramps or pain in the abdomen, and diarrhea. The patient may be prostrated. Chills and sweats occur in the more severe cases. The disorder usually starts suddenly and lasts only a few hours. The patient seems to recover quickly from the disorder.

Streptococcus germs also may produce food poisoning. The sympoms are much like those which occur in the staphylococcus variety. However, the symptoms usually do not occur for from five to eighteen hours after the food is eaten.

In Healthy Persons

Streptococci and staphylococci are found in the noses and throats of healthy persons. They become quite abundant during a respiratory infection, such as a cold or sore throat. It is, therefore, not surprising that foods are often contaminated by them. When some particular food is prepared for a large group of people and the food becomes contaminated, is carelessly handled and not properly refrigerated, naturally a large number of persons may come down with symptoms.

The improper keeping of food is an important factor in the production of the outbreak. The longer the contaminated food is kept in a warm place, the greater will be the amount of toxin formed in it, and thus the more likely it is that those who eat the food will be affected. Hence, it is not a good idea in the preparation of food for large groups of people, to cook it and then allow it to stand in a warm place for a period of time.

Many workers, including Doctor Vlado A. Getting and his co-workers of Boston, think that the streptococci and staphylococci harbored in the noses and throats of food handlers may be responsible for food poisoning outbreaks.

Our Timing Is Off

In a few more weeks the soil will be warm enough for potential gardeners to start thinking about early crops. Yet, it is the prevailing opinion that Victory Gardening in 1945 will not have the benefit of the same widespread enthusiasm which made the program a huge success in 1942, 1943 and 1944. The need is greater than ever, but the novelty has worn off.

The conservation and the equally urgent need for automobile conservation, which were lying heavily on the public conscience when cars were newer and tires better than they are now, have ceased to have the benefit of the popular discussion inspired by earlier fears of a transportation breakdown, yet it is a demonstrable fact that 1945 is going to be the critical year in the progressive deterioration of the people's privately owned transportation.

It is common knowledge that there is critical need for a revival of the patriotic fervor that caused hundreds of citizens, both men and women, to find a place in war production, yet many of these same citizens and others who pitched in to do their part in the preceding three years now are out of the war employment market.

With the Seventh War Loan coming up in May and the inflationary pressure of war boom money growing hourly, there is a singular lack of that firm determination to buy Bonds up to the hilt that enabled the Treasury to count on over-subscriptions earlier in the war. In the Sixth War Loan at the close of last year, individual purchasers failed to respond in the manner that gave them near-perfect and better-than-perfect records in previous drives.

The people's determination to fight inflation where it starts, in black markets, chiseling, the fatal urge to get more when there is less to be had, is beginning to sag. It is getting easy to condone the scramble for special favors, less attention to the grapple for advantage at home. We need to keep quibbles over postwar issues in their proper place; the nation's still in the midst of history's bloodiest, costliest war.

These are some of the obvious signs that our national planning is off in the execution of wartime duties. There are additional signs in government circles of a tendency to ease up when the plainly evident need is for more bearing down—signs that officialdom as well as the people may be guilty of too much enthusiasm too soon and not enough enthusiasm in the closing minutes of the game.

No one can be blamed, and no one needs to be blamed. It merely has become one of the circumstances of the war that too many of us have yielded to the temptation to ease up and become preoccupied with other things too soon. The damage is not irreparable, at least no more so than the damage done late last year when even the military leaders made the mistake of anticipating a letup that wasn't in the cards.

The cure for the condition is, of course, to bring the plainly visible realities back into sharp focus. With collapse of the German war organization in Europe, the victorious Allies will be confronted with history's greatest rehabilitation job as the alternative to chaos. The United States will have to bear a heavy share of responsibility for what happens there. Simultaneously, the United States will have to turn its full power to the successful prosecution of another major war in the Pacific. This is not the time to ease off. This is the time to bear down.

The Mighty Saar

Loss of the Saar Basin to Germany's war production was a major defeat even before it became certain that the disorganized troops left in the region would sustain complete military disaster.

The Saar Basin was added to Germany's war production in the spring of 1935. Less than a month later, Hitler was able to announce that he was building an air force, a submarine fleet and introducing compulsory military training; he had what he wanted.

Germany traditionally needs the Saar's industries and coal mines to wage war. It needed them in 1914—and had them, thanks to Prussian foresight after Napoleon's defeat at Waterloo. At Versailles, Clemenceau demanded the Saar for France, but in one of the scholarly deals which were going to satisfy everybody by satisfying nobody, the Saar was merely detached and turned over to a commission pending a plebiscite at the end of 15 years. The Nazis, starting with the advantage of a sympathetic population, made certain the plebiscite would turn out in their favor. By means of strong-arm campaigning and the repatriation of some 50,000 former Saarlanders brought back for the plebiscite, they outvoted the French about 20 to one—and Hitler had what he needed. France, by the same token, had lost what it needed, though the fact is that even if France had been given the Saar Basin outright it couldn't have utilized its resources against the opposition of a predominantly hostile population.

The loss of the Saar is just as important in reverse as the privilege of using it. Germany had three vital industrial areas—the Saar, the Ruhr and Silesia. The Americans are in the Saar and preparing to invade the Ruhr. The Russians have Silesia.

The Strong and the Weak

"We may deplore, if we choose," said Prime Minister Churchill to the House of Commons, "that there is a difference between the great and small, between the strong and weak in the world. There is undoubtedly such a difference."

Mr. Churchill was speaking in defense of the voting procedure agreed to at Yalta. And he was referring, of course, to great and small nations. No one will deny his broad and obvious statement, but it could do with some expansion and clarification.

Does Mr. Churchill grant that greatness and strength carry responsibility as well as power? Does he feel that a monopoly of greatness and strength implies a monopoly of wisdom? Does he believe that smallness and weakness have no right to equal justice, dignity and consideration with the great and strong?

We trust that the answer is yes to the first question, and no to the others. We trust that President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin feel the same way. And we shall look forward to seeing their sentiments proved in action at the San Francisco conference.

The Stars Say

For Sunday, March 25

SUNDAY'S horoscope, while holding excellent promise for lively, pleasant and successful social functions, artistic engagements and affectional or romantic affiliations yet there is likely to be serious lack of cooperation or approbation from elders, superiors or those holding malicious notions. Reckless, angry attitudes or rash judgments aggravate.

Those whose birthday it is encounter a year of conflicting situations with many pleasant and progressive relations, yet offset by oppositions or difficult problems arising from elders or superiors or those maliciously disposed. With tact, reasonable and amiable conduct this might be composed and a prosperous and happy year, in which romance and culture may be important.

A child born on this day will possess many social and artistic graces enhancing its success and happiness in life, despite opposition from elders.

For Monday, March 26

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a day of much liveliness but possibly in a disturbing, disintegrating and devastating manner, in which the utmost control of the mind, emotions and impulses is imperative in order to escape separations, quarrels, reckless acts and disruptions affecting the life in various relations and with far-reaching reactions. Beware much subtlety, duplicity and intrigue and maintain a calm and balanced course of action.

Those whose birthday it is may not be surprised at a year of turmoil, upset, confusion and intrigue, in which estrangements, regrets, many phases of treachery, intrigue and subtle undercurrents have dangerous results. It would be well to formulate a plan of regulated, calm and realistic judgment if the menace is to be averted. The emotions and impulses may be rampant and should be subdued and rigidly directed to constructive results.

A child born on this day will be lively, astute and crafty, yet be carried away by its erratic emotions or impulses, unless given early rigid direction and discipline.

At last several bridge prizes that are worth keeping have been won. Thanks to the Yanks!

While we're having a nice spring over here, Germany is due for a bad fall.

At least be thankful that you can buy the belt that Uncle Sam says you are going to have to pull in.

Be it ever so humble—where else can you go but home after midnight?

Symptoms of Food Poisoning

BY HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

OUTBREAKS of food poisoning in war plants may become an increasing cause of loss of time from work or absenteeism. However, much can be done to prevent these occurrences.

One of the most common causes of these outbreaks is contamination of food with germs known as staphylococcus aureus. These germs form a toxin or poison. The patient seems to recover quickly from the disorder.

Streptococcus germs also may produce food poisoning. The symptoms

Streptococci and staphylococci are found in the noses and throats of healthy persons. They become quite abundant during a respiratory infection, such as a cold or sore throat. would indicate that one of the most effective methods of preventing food poisoning is proper personal hygiene by food handlers. They should be taught to keep their hands away from the nose and mouth, to cover the mouth while sneezing and then to wash their hands immediately after coughing or sneezing.

Food should be kept covered whenever possible, and foods which are perishable should be kept covered. As short a time as possible should intervene between the cooking and eating of the food. "Left-overs" should not be mixed with fresh foods unless it is certain that the left-overs are safe.

Of course, any food handler who has a sore throat should be kept away from work until the condition has cleared up.

Death's BRIGHT DIAMONDS

by Lionel Mosher

XVI

I WENT back down into the cellar, Eric had just finished putting coal on the fire and Charley was standing by the corridor entrance watching his chin thoughtfully. "Look," He pointed beyond the get-tubs to a door that I had not noticed before. Apparently it gave access to the south wing of the house. "We found a bed in there, Nick," he said, "in some old carpet butts, and a pair of sport shoes."

"Eyes?" I looked carefully at Eric's feet. I had never noticed them before. They were big, but not big enough to make the footprints I had seen. I went through the door into the room. The stale odor of cigarettes assailed my nostrils. There was a cot against the side wall and by the cot a pair of white and tan saddle-shoes. And there were as big as Eric's. The maker's name was plainly visible: Blakely and Hodson. They made a good shoe. There was nothing whatever in the room besides the bed—not even a window. Evidently, the space had been used for storage and our intruder had utilized it for the simple expedient of storing his big-footed body by night. When we got back upstairs, Pat had a cup of black coffee for me. "It's the best I could do, darlin'." She smiled contritely. "You've a jaded look."

"Thanks, Pat." I took the coffee, but it was strong and brackish. I couldn't get it down. "It was left over from this morning and I heated it over," apologized Pat. "Maybe I shouldn't have."

"Pat, my love," Brenda remarked, "maybe a maiden has languished in spinstery till death for less."

"There could be worse fates," smiled Pat lightly.

Charley and I sat on the rocks in front of The Ledges. The sun was high and the warmth of it warmed through my jacket. The air was so still that the smoke from my cigarettes hung almost motionless before me. Pat and Brenda had taken the station wagon to Minot for provisions and at the last moment Eric with his self-assured civility had tagged along to do some errands of his own.

"Tramps don't wear Blakely and Hodson shoes," Charley reflected. "Why would anyone want to sleep in that stuffy hole in the wall?" I asked.

"For concealment. It's a beautiful hide-out," Charley tossed a stone into a moss-green pool. "And you almost stumbled into who's using it."

"I didn't stumble. I was on the hunt."

Charley looked at me oddly and told him about the intruder in my room last night and the big footprints on the cellar floor this morning. When I had finished, he leaned his back against the rock and locked his hands behind his head.

"Nick, has it seemed to you that the whole atmosphere since we've been here at The Ledges has been—well—rather theatrical?"

"Phony, you mean?"

"I suppose that's what I mean. Doesn't it seem odd that Phineas Hudson was so anxious to get down here the moment he heard about your plan to rusticate here?"

"Pat's plan," I corrected him. "Again he looked at me strangely. "Mr. Hudson explained," I went on, "that he is here only because he is distressed about Pat's involvement in this mess I appear to be in."

"But Pat wouldn't have come down here at all if it hadn't been for her father's coming down," Charley pointed out. "And I hadn't thought of that. Phineas Hudson was the last man I would suspect of guile. He had no need for it. Or had he?"

"And the Temples," continued Charley. "What are they doing here? And Eric Woolf?"

"And the guy who slugged me in the cellar," I concluded dryly. "I don't believe it was Eric," said Charley, "or Bruce Temple, for that matter."

"You certainly don't think it was Phineas Hudson?"

He didn't answer immediately. Then he said:

"Maybe indirectly. Didn't Pat suggest that you go down to fix the fire this morning?"

"Look, Charley," I said. "Get this straight: If I thought Pat Hudson was trying to murder me, I'd be out hunting for the best criminal lawyer in the country to get her off. And just remember this. There isn't a single person in our chummy little group except Pat, and possibly Brenda, who could furnish a good alibi if he were pinned down concerning this morning's fracas."

"You forget me," Charley said mildly. "I was in the kitchen when Brenda heard the scuffle and Pat was cooking the eggs. In order to find a thing, Nick, you have to look where it isn't. I'm not suggesting that Pat Hudson is out for your scalp. But has it occurred to you that she might be an unwitting tool of someone's?"

"It had. But I merely said: 'Go on.'"

"Suppose Phineas Hudson knew all along that there was somebody here at The Ledges—possibly somebody whose presence he had reason to conceal. That would account for his sudden desire to indulge in this—for him—entirely unnatural outing. It would explain his wanting to beat you down here."

"But who the devil could it be?" Charley turned out the palms of his hands.

"I don't know. It's only a theory. We have to consider all angles." (To Be Continued)

Standing at rigid attention before emblem of the 101st Airborne division, first entire division in United States history to be cited for extraordinary heroism in the defense of the key communications center of Bastogne, France, are Gen. TEST SHOWS HOW JELLIED GASOLINE BOMBS HIT JAP HOMELAND

FROM TOKYO TO HAGUYA AND KOBE, the Japanese homeland has come to know well the devastating effects of the M-69—the jelled gasoline incendiary bomb which is now being used to rain fire on B-29 Superfortresses. At top is a close-up of the "deadly jelly bean" with a woman worker loading the thickened gasoline into the bomb's tail. In center, an Army Air Force photo shows crewmen of the 21st Bomber Command on Saipan looking at the clusters of fire bombs that have fallen on the island. At bottom, an old Japanese film demonstrates what happens when these bombs drop on NIPPON's cities. (International)

Curfew Rings for Servicemen

Despite New York Mayor LaGuardia's defiant statement that "regardless of President Roosevelt and the Army, I'm running the city," military police made the rounds of bars and night clubs, ordering military personnel out by midnight, thus supporting War Mobilizer Byrnes' edict. Here MP's leave the "Russian Yar" after warning proprietor to oust servicemen at midnight.

MANILA IS OURS, BUT LUZON--ANOTHER STORY

THOUGH THE CAPITAL of the Philippines' largest island—Luzon—is flying the American flag, there still is fighting to be done to secure the island. Evidence of that is shown in the above picture, where bodies of Japs lie near the mouth of a hole on the crest of "Bryant Hill," named after a soldier killed when the 25th Infantry Division took the hill. Two miles west of Puncan in the Luzon hills, heavily fortified and strategically placed, these Japs died from one squirt of a flame thrower. The Yank on the business end of the flame thrower thought he was shooting at one Nip, but ended up with a tally of 23. This is an official U. S. Army Signal Corps photo. (International Soundphoto)

Deauteous, bouncing Rosalind Russell is back on the screen after a six-month session with medicos, but this time without the "kick-in-the-pants" scenes characteristic of her last picture. She collapsed after completion of "Roughly Speaking," the film made from Louise Randall Pierson's rowdy-dow biographical story of the 1930 depression.

High School Announces New Track, Basketball Schedules

COPE'S TRACK TEAM BOOKS 7 MEETS, 5 HERE

Cage Schedule Includes 10 Home Games, Eight Away; One New Foe

Salem High school's 1945 track schedule and 1945-46 basketball schedules are set. Faculty Manager Fred Cope announced today.

The track card includes seven home meets for the local track and the state meet at Columbus for local qualifiers.

As usual the Northeastern Ohio District meet, the largest of its kind in Ohio, will be held at Salem on Saturday, May 19.

The basketball card for Coach Bob Miller's aggregation next year embodies few changes from the state played this season. An 18 game card is booked, with 10 games at home and eight away.

The only changes involve dropping Minerva and Akron Kenmore from the schedule and adding an additional game with Wellsville as well as a home contest against a new rival, Kent Roosevelt.

Home and away series are slated with East Liverpool, Alliance and Wellsville. Other opponents are Columbiana, Lisbon, Ravenna, Canton Lehman, Alummi, Kent Roosevelt, Warren, Youngstown Rayen, Girard, Canton Lincoln, Struthers and Sebring.

Track Team Working

Cope is at work with his tracksters already in the High school gym and is hoping for an early break in the weather this season so that the chinders at Reilly stadium will allow outdoor practice.

Cope's prospects this year are not overly rosy, but the veteran mentor is expected to again field one of the district's top groups. Cope began last year with what he termed a "death of material" and moulded one of the finest teams ever to represent Salem.

The feature event on the local schedule next month will be Uhrichsville relays, which they captured last year from a field of 12 teams. The try in the McKinley relays on May 5 is tentative, Cope says, and may be dropped to substitute a dual meet with Youngstown South on May 4.

The complete track and basketball schedules:

Gumbert Reports To Reds, Halted By Army Induction

BLOOMINGTON, IND., March 24—Harry Gumbert, a right-handed pitcher, surprised everybody.

Last month a news dispatch told of Harry's induction into the army but yesterday he came into the Reds' training camp ready for work.

He had just taken off his coat when a telegram from his Houston, Tex., draft board informed him to report for "immediate induction."

RUSS PETERS GOES TO ARMY APRIL 20

LAFAYETTE, IND., March 24.—Russ Peters, general handyman for the Indians, will be inducted into the army April 20, another blow to the Cleveland club's already ailing infield situation.

Vice President Roger Peckinpaugh informed Manager Lou Boudreau of Peters' induction yesterday when he said he wired all the Indians who have failed to report, but only Peters replied.

Blessed with a predominance of pitching material, the club's vice president would have liked to trade some of the hurlers for infielders.

However, after a conference with other major league officials, he said other teams had little they could barter.

Bans Draw Decisions At Big Time Gotham Fights

NEW YORK, March 24.—Lt. Col. Eddie Egan, new chairman of the New York State Athletic commission, has banned draw decisions at big time fights in New York.

"I have instructed the officials," the colonel said, "to keep a point score along with the round-by-round method. If, for instance, they have each fighter winning five rounds, as happened on one card last week, they are to determine the winner on the total point score. In this way all draws will be eliminated."

Ohio State and New York Quintets In Title Clash

NEW YORK, March 24.—The eastern representative for the NCAA basketball championship will be decided tonight when New York University's Violets tackle a taller and heavier Ohio State quintet.

The game will follow a consolation third-place contest between Tufts and Kentucky.

Nelson and Snead Meet

GREENSBORO, N. C., March 23.—Those two current best shotmakers in the business, Byron Nelson and Sammy Snead, renew their golfing rivalry here today in the $7,500 Greensboro open, with only two more meets remaining on the winter circuit—Durham and Atlanta.

Sammy has won six tournaments on the current trail, and needs only one more to set a record for one winter's tour.

Chuckran Joins Up

STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—Johnny Chuckran of Penn State will carry the ball for Uncle Sam as a member of the Army until the war is won.

Ken Wiesner Has High Jumped 6 feet 5 1/2 inches or better in all appearances this season.

MILWAUKEE—Kenneth Wiesner

has high jumped 6 feet 5 1/2 inches or better in all appearances except one this season. The fact that Wiesner performed as center on Marquette's basketball team prevented his obtaining an early start in track, but the well-conditioned six-foot four-inch Navy trainee sophomore in the school of dentistry quickly rounded into form.

Conrad Jennings has sought consistency in the high jump ever since recovering from the head-aches given him by the Hilltoppers' remarkable Negro freshman, Eddie Burke, in 1936. Burke established what was then a world indoor record by soaring a foot 8 5/16 inches in the National A. A. U. Championships at Madison Square garden.

Two weeks later he was eliminated from the Wisconsin State A. A. U. meet in Madison with the cross bar set at 5-10.

"You figure that one out," muses Coach Jennings. "Burke was a great athlete, but thoroughly unpredictable."

"Wiesner, on the other hand, does not flunk."

Ken Wiesner launched his 1945 indoor competition by winning the title in the Michigan relays with 6 feet 6 1/2.

He tied Pvt. Joshua Williamson, who stationed at Camp Plauche, La., for first place in the National A. A. U. meet at Madison Square garden with a dual meet won from Wisconsin by clearing 6 feet 5 1/2. Next 6-5 1/2 at East Lansing was good enough to bag the Central Collegiate conference title.

Wiesner holds the National Collegiate A. A. championship, having last June in Milwaukee scaled his dizzyest height—6 feet 7 3/16—to dethrone Fred Sheffield, Utah basketball center.

With the Chicago Relays out of the way, Wiesner is headed for the Purdue Relays, March 24.

He tied Mel Groomes of Indiana at 6-4 for a second to the 6-6 of Dwight Edelman of Illinois and Wright Field of Dayton, O., in the Chicago Relays, but, scanning the form chart, Conrad Jennings knows Ken Wiesner spells winning heights.

Columbiana, 3 Other Class B Schools In Tournament Finals

(By Associated Press)

SPRINGFIELD, March 24.—The cream of the Ohio high school Class B basketball crop—Ashville, Northridge, Columbiana and Sandusky St. Mary—today awaited the referee's whistle beginning the championship playoffs.

Each team practiced yesterday at the Springfield field house, scene of the tournament, and coaches appeared satisfied.

Veteran of tournament play will be Coach Lee Zieroff of Sandusky, who piloted a state championship team in 1936. Four other times his teams reached the finals.

Zieroff at 37 has been coaching for 13 years. John Cabas, 28, of Columbiana; Ben Ankney, 26, of Northridge, and Lawrence Fullam, 31, of Ashville, have coached a total of 17 years. Only Cabas, a graduate of Mount Union, played basketball in college.

With reserved seats already gone, tournament officials expect 4,000 to turn out for the afternoon and evening games.

Presence of Harold Roth, St. Mary star, in the Springfield field house practice bolstered the team. His mother, Mrs. Harold Roth, died Thursday and it was thought at first

RHINE

Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands called on Dutch forces of the interior to be ready for orders. The defending German force has a tank corps of undoubtedly lowered strength in reserve. One estimate at Supreme headquarters placed the German strength at 15 to 20 divisions, but German divisions these days are badly depleted and underarmed. Marshal Montgomery noted in an order of the day that four German armies had been chewed up in the Rhineland and that a fifth was now being obliterated in the palatinate cleanup by Lts. Gen. Alexander M. Patch and George S. Patton, Jr.

Revoke Liquor Permits

COLUMBUS, March 24—The State Liquor Control board today revoked two licenses of drink dispensers charged with sales to minors. They were:

Eva Flora Fortunato, Golden Gate wine store, 37 S. Liberty ave., Alliance, and George Makris, Hamburg, King restaurant, 131 S. Main st., day that four German armies had

Christian Lives Happy Life, Evangelist Says

There is happiness and security in this present life for the individual who will live for Christ, aside from the prospect of eternal values. Rev. John Woodhouse of Batavia, N. Y., pointed out in a message on "Youth at the Fork of the Road" last night at a Youth for Christ rally at the First Friends church.

"Deciding for Christ will bring you out of the pit and put a new song in your heart, he said. "In the life without Christ there is just an existence, for a sinner has no God."

The Kuhn twins of Cuyahoga Falls will be featured in the song service at another youth rally at 7:15 tonight. Evangelist Woodhouse will speak on "Why Young People Go Wrong and Who is to Blame."

The Evangelistic Crusade will close with the Sunday services. The evening service will begin at 7 instead of 7:30.

A sacred concert will be given by the Cleveland Bible college chorus at 3 p. m. The chorus will give concerts in two other churches in this district Sunday—Damascus Friends church, and East Goshen Friends church.

Program Is Enjoyed By Perry Grange Members

Three applications for membership were received at a meeting of Perry grange last night at the hall, Franklin rd. The program consisted of musical numbers by Tyrus Swartz, Verle Gressinger, Mrs. Ruth Schmidt and Miss Eleanor Bates. Games, contests and dancing provided entertainment at the social period.

At a meeting on April 4 the third and four degrees will be exempted.

DISTINTEGRATION OF GERMAN ARMY EXPECTED SOON

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 24—The German army is expected by top Washington officials to begin disintegrating soon.

This is the basis for a widely held belief that the European war will be won in the next few weeks except for large scale mopping up operations.

There is hope but no real expectation that Germany will surrender. Despite multiplying peace-feeler reports, it is possible to state authoritatively that none of the approaches thus far made is regarded here as coming from any person capable of surrendering Germany.

Under the unprejudiced Allied military pressure of the war's final stage, a political upheaval in Germany is possible. But the Nazis retain their terror grip on the nation, and no official with whom this subject has been discussed believes that Hitler or any of his associates intend to surrender.

The prospect foreseen here is that the battered German army simply will go to pieces. What escapes the Allied steamroller is expected to pull back into central Germany and then southward to the natural defenses of the Bavarian mountains to wage guerrilla as long as possible.

From this grows the strong belief that surrenders of large units of German forces now may be anticipated. Generals without war crime records might be able to save something by giving up while there still is time.

The German army is entering its final battles short of oil, and badly outnumbered by the Allied forces. The German air force is about finished.

It is considered entirely possible by authorities here that there may be no decisive V-E day—that bitter-end resistance may drag on for weeks and months. What is considered more realistic and probable is an "R-D" day—beginning redeployment of forces from Europe to the Pacific.

Plane Takeoff Is Fatal

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 24.—Victor Payette, 23, of Baltimore, Md., died last night in the crash of a trainer plane at Eleanor, Putnam county, as it was taking off after refueling. Payette had been to Athens, O.

The plane's other occupant, Harold Hanna, 18, of Charleston, received possible internal injuries. Witnesses said the plane, in taking off, struck two high tension wires, causing it to crash.

Taft, Burton Vote 'No'

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Both Ohio Senators Taft and Burton voted against confirmation of Aubrey Williams as rural electrification administrator.

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, March 24.—The good war news resulted in a relatively poor stock market and leaders generally were sold at declines of fractions to a point or more.

Most pivots exhibited considerable hesitancy. However, offerings never were urgent. The ticker tape loafed at intervals and transfers of around 350,000 shares were among the smallest for Saturday in several months. Few recoveries were in evidence near the close.

Despite these stakes, German resistance at first was spotty. Abnormal numbers of German prisoners were taken in small attacks. One division alone had nearly 1,000 before the morning was over.

The Allied attack was succeeding primarily not because of German morale. It was because of these factors and hundreds like them.

The calm, icy courage of British commandos who lay within 1,500 yards of Wesel while the RAF put on one of the greatest night precision attacks of the war. Three hundred Lancasters flattened the town in 15 minutes.

The commandos rushed the flaming rubble and crushed the resistance of tough German parachute troops.

The bravery of American transport pilots who flew their cumbersome ships with heavy gliders in tow into a storm of flak and dropped grim airborne troops. Sometimes they came back across the Rhine in flames, sometimes not at all.

How Battle Developed
But these are only snapshots. Here is how the great battle developed:

Yesterday afternoon smoke hung over the entire Ruhr and the Rhine from Dusseldorf to Arnhem. Some of it was the result of Allied smoke pots along the river, but most of it was from flaming buildings of the Ruhr and the impact of thousands of American and British bombers and fighters.

There was little movement behind the front late yesterday afternoon as the Ninth army and the British Second army lay quiet.

With darkness the front stirred to life. From the forests came the rumble of tanks and trucks, and on the roads long convoys sprang forth with loads of every conceivable weapon, thousands of tons of bridging material and huge landing craft. Some of the weapons were still on the Allied secret list.

You wondered how this vast assortment of equipment could arrive at the right place at the right time. Most of it did. When it did not or failed of its purpose American or British ingenuity found a way to do without it.

Always, the Infantry
Far more impressive were the long lines of silent infantry hiking across the fields and along the roads. The sight brought a tightness to one's throat.

ARMADA

of Bremen, over the Wilhelmshaven area, south of Emden and near Cuxhaven. The enemy indicated smaller forces were in the areas of Muenster, Vechta, Quakenbuck and Oldenburg.

As today's massive assault was launched an area of at least 1,000 square miles facing Field Marshal Montgomery's troops across the Rhine had been virtually bottled up by the second Allied bombing offensive of the last 10 days.

Mosquitos also hit Berlin last night for the 32nd consecutive night, shot up two airfields and several trains behind the Ruhr.

During the day 25 German planes were shot down. Ten more enemy planes were destroyed on the ground.

The U. S. Ninth air force lost 10 fighters. The British Second tactical air force lost one plane.

Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands called on Dutch forces of the interior to be ready for orders. The defending German force has a tank corps of undoubtedly lowered strength in reserve. One estimate at Supreme headquarters placed the German strength at 15 to 20 divisions, but German divisions these days are badly depleted and underarmed. Marshal Montgomery noted in an order of the day that four German armies had been chewed up in the Rhineland and that a fifth was now being obliterated in the palatinate cleanup by Lts. Gen. Alexander M. Patch and George S. Patton, Jr.

Christian Lives Happy Life, Evangelist Says

There is happiness and security in this present life for the individual who will live for Christ, aside from the prospect of eternal values, Rev. John Woodhouse of Batavia, N. Y., pointed out in a message on "Youth at the Fork of the Road" last night at a Youth for Christ rally at the First Friends church.

"Deciding for Christ will bring you out of the pit and put a new song in your heart, he said. "In the life without Christ there is just an existence, for a sinner has no God."

The Kuhn twins of Cuyahoga Falls will be featured in the song service at another youth rally at 7:15 tonight. Evangelist Woodhouse will speak on "Why Young People Go Wrong and Who is to Blame."

The Evangelistic Crusade will close with the Sunday services. The evening service will begin at 7 instead of 7:30.

A sacred concert will be given by the Cleveland Bible college chorus at 3 p. m. The chorus will give concerts in two other churches in this district Sunday—Damascus Friends church, and East Goshen Friends church.

DISTINTEGRATION OF GERMAN ARMY EXPECTED SOON

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The German army is expected by top Washington officials to begin disintegrating soon.

This is the basis for a widely held belief that the European war will be won in the next few weeks except for large scale mopping up operations.

There is hope but no real expectation that Germany will surrender. Despite multiplying peace-feeler reports, it is possible to state authoritatively that none of the approaches thus far made is regarded here as coming from any person capable of surrendering Germany.

Under the unprecedented Allied military pressure of the war's final stage, a political upheaval in Germany is possible. But the Nazis retain their terror grip on the nation, and no official with whom this subject has been discussed believes that Hitler or any of his associates intend to surrender.

The prospect foreseen here is that the battered German army simply will go to pieces. What escapes the Allied steamroller is expected to pull back into central Germany and then southward to the natural defenses of the Bavarian mountains to wage guerrilla war as long as possible.

From this grows the strong belief that surrenders of large units of German forces now may be anticipated. Generals without war-crime records might be able to save something by giving up while there still is time.

The German army is entering its final battles short of oil, and badly outnumbered by the Allied forces. The German air force is about finished.

It is considered entirely possible by authorities here there may be no decisive V-E day—That bitter-end resistance may drag on for weeks and months. What is considered more realistic and probable is an "R-D" day—beginning re-deployment of forces from Europe to the Pacific.

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, March 24.—The good war news resulted in a relatively poor stock market and leaders generally were sold at declines of fractions to a point or more.

Most pivots exhibited considerable hesitancy. However, offerings never were urgent. The ticker tape loaded at intervals and transfers of around 350,000 shares were among the smallest for Saturday in several months. Few recoveries were in evidence near the close.

Despite these stakes, German resistance at first was spotty. Abnormal numbers of German prisoners were taken in small attacks. One division alone had nearly 1,000 before the morning was over.

The Allied attack was succeeding primarily not because of German morale. It was because of these factors and hundreds like them.

The calm, icy courage of British commandos who lay within 1,500 yards of Wesel while the RAF put on one of the greatest night precision attacks of the war. Three hundred Lancasters flattened the town in 15 minutes.

The Commandos rushed the flaming rubble and crushed the resistance of tough German parachute troops.

The bravery of American transport pilots who flew their cumbersome ships with heavy gliders in tow into a storm of flak and dropped grim airborne troops. Sometimes they came back across the Rhine in flames, sometimes not at all.

How Battle Developed But these are only snapshots. Here is how the great battle developed:

Yesterday afternoon smoke hung over the entire Ruhr and the Rhine from Düsseldorf to Arnhem. Some of it was the result of Allied smoke pots along the river, but most of it was from flaming buildings of the Ruhr and the impact of thousands of American and British bombers and fighters.

There was little movement behind the front late yesterday afternoon as the Ninth army and the British Second army lay quiet.

With darkness the front stirred to life. From the forests came the rumble of tanks and trucks, and on the roads long convoys sprang forth with loads of every conceivable weapon, thousands of tons of bridging material and huge landing craft. Some of the weapons were still on the Allied secret list.

You wondered how this vast assortment of equipment could arrive at the right place at the right time. Most of it did. When it did not or failed of its purpose American or British ingenuity found a way to go without it.

Always, the Infantry Far more impressive were the long lines of silent infantry hiking across the fields and along the roads. The sight brought a tightness to one's throat.

ARMADA

of Bremen, over the Wilhelmshaven area, south of Emden and near Cuxhaven. The enemy indicated smaller forces were in the areas of Muenster, Vechta, Quakenbuck and Oldenburg.

As today's massive assault was launched an area of at least 1,000 square miles facing Field Marshal Montgomery's troops across the Rhine had been virtually bottled up by the second Allied bombing offensive of the last 10 days.

Mosquitos also hit Berlin last night for the 32nd consecutive night, shot up two airfields and several trains behind the Ruhr.

During the day 25 German planes were shot down. Ten more enemy planes were destroyed on the ground.

The U. S. Ninth air force lost 10 fighters. The British Second air force lost one plane.
